The Turkey Shoot.

Wiggings' turkey shoot in Empire drew a large crowd and those who visited the sport are red hot for another chance to take in fifteen pound birds for two bits.

It was the Carson shooters this time that walked Wiggings' log.

At 6 o'clock the mark was a little wild, but when they got the range they made a bird squawk nearly every time they pulled the trigger.

Early in the game Wiggings had a smile across his face, when the air was full of rifle smoke and the birds intact, but later in the afternoon his jaw hung at half mast more than once when the birds turned their claws towards the sky. He is contemplating another shoot to get even, but his friends say that he is merely doing it to show that he is dead game, not because he thinks he can do any better. Wiggings is nothing, if not game.

VICTORY AND SPOILS.

HOW OLD HICKORY DISPOSED OF THE QUESTION.

It was old Hickory, as they used to call General Jackson, who gave to politics the saying "To the victor belongs the spoils."

No one can deny that Jackson was about the boss of all the Presidents of his party, as Abe Lincoln was the boss of his. On January 1st, the Silver Party will take control of the State of Nevada, and they will run it as a partizan proposition just as the Republicans have always run it.

There are many men applying for offices in both parties. Some old Republicans claim that they have quietly stood in with the Silver men and voted their ticket. The claims of these men should be considered before adopted, they should have the endorsement of good Silver men.

There are also men claiming to be Silver men who never did a lick for the party on election day, who are loud mouthed in asserting that they saved the various county tickets by their individual exertion. Had the Republicans won they would be making the same talk to them and for the same object. The sheep and the goats will be well separated before the 1st of January.

But getting back to old Jackson once more the following anecdote will illustrate his way of doing business.

Lewis Cass, secretary of war, was over in the White House one day with some important papers for the President to sign, among them being a court martial findings.

"Cass what is this?" inquired Jackson, as he was about to sign his name to the documents.

"It is a court martial," answered Cass.

"It dismisses an officer from service and the President must sign such orders."

Jackson toyed with the papers and said musingly: "Dismissed him from the army, eh? Why?"

"Drunkness, getting drunk and falling down on parade, or something of that kind," answered the secretary.

"Who ordered the court?" asked Jackson.

"General Scott," answered Cass.

"Who is it?" inquired the President with more interest.

"Inspector General Kraun," replied Cass.

"What?" shouted Jackson. "My old friend Kraun! Cass just read what the papers say."

The secretary read the usual form of the court martial sentence in such cases. The President then took the paper and wrote across the bottom where he was about to sign his name.

"The within findings are disproved, and Colonel Kraun is restored to his duty and rank."

He passed the paper back to Secretary Cass, and said with his usual vehemence:

"By the Eternal, Cass, when you and Scott serve your country as well as that man has you can get drunk on duty every day."

A young man from Tennessee, son of a friend of General Jackson's came to Washington for a place. He looked about and found what he wanted. It was in the War department and filled by a very efficient Whig, whom Secretary Cass would not remove. The young man told Jackson the situation and Cass was sent for.

"Cass," said the President, "this young man, son of my old friend says you have got a place in the War department filled by a Whig which you won't give him."

Secretary Cass explained that the duties of the office were of a peculiar kind, and he could get no one to fill the place if the man in it should be removed. Jackson flared up.

"By the Eternal, Cass, do you mean to tell me you have an office in your department filled by a Whig which can't be filled by a Democrat? Then abolish the office!"

The young man got his place.—Washington Post.

Versatile.

Truckee has a preacher who, when not engaged in his ministerial duties, occupies his time in painting the church. It is said he does very creditable work and shows taste in the selection of colors. When business is dull in the preaching line or his pay is not forthcoming promptly, he can make a few dollars taking odd jobs of painting from the members of his flock.

Sandow the strong man claims to be a German, but some people think that he is a Mussulman.

Gambling Taught.

A lady in San Francisco who has made a living for years betting on horse races, has opened a school in the Phelan building where she teaches ladies how to bet on horse races, or more properly speaking she will teach them how to win. It seems odd that anyone would advertise to teach people, especially ladies, how to gamble, and we regret that the pernicious habit has so crept into San Francisco society, that ladies go to a gambling instead of a cooking school, or study botany and piano playing. At the same time we would like to form the acquaintance of this lady at an early date, and learn how to place money on a horse. When the writer first came to California, from good old Puritan stock—in Nebraska—he considered it wicked to bet on the turf. Running with William Thompson of the Santa Rosa Democrat and old Lithecum however, taught us bad habits, and we began backing horses. In four years of this sort of foolishness we never won a bet except once, and the judges declared the pools off. If this San Francisco woman can teach us a system by which this hard luck can be reversed, we would like to have her communicate with this office at an early date.

Advertising exchanged for instruction at favorable rates.

Sure Cure for Pneumonia.

The following recipe for pneumonia has been handed us by a gentleman who tells us that he knows it will help sufferers from the disease, as it has been tried recently by a friend to whom he gave it and afforded instant relief. The following is the recipe: Take ten or twelve raw onions and chop fine, and put in a large spider over a hot fire; then add about the same quantity of rye meal and vinegar enough to form a thick paste; let it simmer five or ten minutes. In the meantime stir it thoroughly, then put it in a cotton bag large enough to cover the lungs, and apply to the chest as hot as the patient can bear; when this gets cool apply another, and thus continue by repeating the poultices, and in a few hours the patient will be out of danger. This valuable recipe was given him several years ago by an old physician, who stated that it had not failed in a single instance to effect a cure of this too often fatal malady.—Banner Whig.

Bob Beatty.

The Attorney-General elect has reached Carson and is hunting a domicile in which to reside for four years, perhaps longer.

Mr. Beatty made a very active canvass of the State and of all the stump speakers, none kept an audience in such good humor as Bob Beatty, as he is called by everybody. He made a clean, gentlemanly canvass and during the campaign contributed several articles to the press on the Constitutional Amendments, which showed that the Silver party had nominated a man for Attorney-General who had the right kind of legal knowledge.

During the fight he was on the pleasantest terms with Mr. Torreyson, his opponent, and the latter has excepted the result very gracefully and is making it very pleasant for his successful opponent.

Mr. Beatty's plurality in the election was over 500.
